MEDIA RELEASE

MID MURRAY COMMUNITY ASKED TO HAVE THEIR SAY ON FUTURE COUNCIL PRIORITIES

The Mid Murray community is being asked to have their say on what they believe should be the priorities for the area's Council into the future.

The Mid Murray Council Community Priorities Survey is now open, and the feedback gathered from local residents, businesses and property owners will help shape changes to the Council's strategic direction, as well as guiding its long-term sustainability focus.

The survey asks people to identify what they value about current operations, what they'd like to see change and how they believe the Council can make the Mid Murray a better place.

Mid Murray Mayor Simone Bailey said the survey was a key component of Council's community consultation ahead of updating its Strategic Plan.

"One of our commitments to the Mid Murray community for the coming year is to review our Strategic Plan, with a view to identifying financial sustainability measures, cost savings and efficiencies," Mayor Bailey said.

"Before we begin work on that process, it's so important for us to understand which of the services, programs, infrastructure and initiatives Council provides that our community already values, as well as what they believe needs to change, and what we could be doing to improve things.

"Council does have challenges in continuing to operate in an environment of rising costs, while still facing the financial impact of recovery and rebuilding from the recent Murray River flood. We do have statutory services that we are obligated to provide as well, and we need to ensure these are delivered in an efficient and effective way.

"In addition to those essential services, facilities and programs, Council manages a wide range of other activities and it may be that some of these are no longer required, or are not delivering a benefit to our community.

"The feedback we receive from our community through this survey will give us a clear picture of what people want us to retain, what they're comfortable with us changing and where they want us to head into the future. This will be invaluable in creating a Strategic Plan that meets the changing needs of our community in a time of challenging economic pressures."

The survey is open now and can be completed online at <https://bit.ly/MMCCCommunitySurvey> or in hardcopy from Council's offices. It will run until 19 June 2023.

Information collected through the survey will be used by Council to create an updated draft Strategic Plan and to inform sustainability planning. The updated draft Strategic Plan will be presented to the community for consultation later this year.

Welcome to this new section in the Tungkillo Gazette

We at the Tungkillo Progress Club are excited to announce the progress of achieving a community Garden for everyone, but this garden is a little different to the traditional community gardens, it will be a native food garden. In this garden we are going to incorporate 4 main areas.

1. Fire-retardant plants
2. Native plants – that can be grown in the everyday backyard.
3. Native Plants – that have native traditional medically properties and food.
4. Habitat for local wildlife

Every month we will describe in this section one of the plants in the garden. Describing one of the 4 main ideas, why we chose this plant.

Sometimes we may discuss something important to the community. We are starting with the local SA plants that you can get easily. Tungkillo Progress Club would like to invite the community to come to help plant, do some weeding or just visit and see what we are doing.

Everyone is learning along the way as we are not experts, and if you have any ideas, please let us know.

We are all looking forward to this new adventure that we hope to begin this project very soon in 2023.

Contact us by the Tungkillo SA Community Notice Board- Buy-Swap-Sell Facebook page leave a message and Mandy or Sue will provide information.

SALT BUSH (Atriplex nummularia) Large shrub

Good drought tolerance plant. Grow well in low rainfall areas receiving less than 300mm of rain but will need to be water until established. Good forage source for animals during dry times, but because of high salt content must have good amount of drinking water for stock. Suitable for human consumption. This Native Australian plant will grow in a range of different soils including saline soil, does not tolerate waterlogging. Oldman saltbush is frost tolerant once established. Can make an excellent hedge. Large shrub can have male/female/ or can have bisexual components to produce seeds. Oldman saltbush has a limited ability to spread, it does not easily spread from seeds.

Oldman saltbush leaves are a great source of protein. Leaves are fleshy with a salty herbal flavour. Use leaves in a salad or a bed for roasting meats (it's great with lamb). Dried they are great as a seasoning or with other herbs by sprinkling on foods. Enjoyed blanched, sauté, wrapped around meats like fish or with stuffing in poultry, stir-fry's or can be used as a substitute for salt.

It also contains calcium and antioxidants for those watching their salt intake – Oldman saltbush has 20% less sodium compared to table salt. Store fresh saltbush stems and leaves loosely in a bag in the fridge for up to 5 days. Dried saltbush can be kept in an airtight container for up to 4 months to retain their high-quality best flavour. (I have some in my cupboard that is over 12 months old and still good)

Can act as a fire-retardant plant due to the salty leaves and it also high in moisture in the leaves and stems. In case of a fire, this shrub doesn't burn very easily. Please note that these plants can slow a fire down, most likely not stop a fire in its tracks, but may burn once dried out.

The indigenous people of Australia collected the seed to roast and grind down to form a flour substitute for adding to damper. They used the ashes of the burnt leaves like baking soda. The leaves were traditionally used medicinally and were often added to water as skin cleansers for sores, burns, and wounds.

They also used the Oldman Saltbush for windbreak shelters from the strong winds, as a fire break and shade.

Saltbush Damper

This is easy to make, and by adding the saltbush. Good straight out of a hot oven with butter.

Ingredients

170g wholemeal plain flour

170g SR Flour

1.5 teaspoons of freshly ground dried saltbush

Half (.5) teaspoon bicarbonate of soda

Pinch of salt

290mls of milk

Method

Preheat oven to 200° C

Place all the dried ingredients together including saltbush into a mixing bowl and stir together. Make a well and add milk. Mix quickly with a fork to form a soft dough. Add a little more milk if dry or more flour if too sticky. Turn out on to floured surface and knead briefly (don't over knead or it will become hard as a rock). Form into shape that you desire flatten slightly place on baking paper on tray, cut a crisis cross on top of loaf and brush with extra milk if desire. Bake approx. 30 minutes or until loaf sounds hollow when you knock the bottom. Can also use as scone mix, add bacon and cheese for a savoury scone, smother with butter when hot. Makes fanatic toast the next morning also.

Enjoy

MEDIA RELEASE*FINANCIAL SUSTAINABILITY, FLOOD RECOVERY
THE FOCUS OF MID MURRAY COUNCIL'S BUDGET

Supporting the ongoing recovery of South Australia's worst flood-affected Council region is one of the key priorities for Mid Murray Council in the coming financial year.

The Council's Draft 2023/24 Annual Business Plan and Budget focuses on rebuilding following the devastating recent River Murray flood, while also committing to pursuing financial sustainability in a highly challenging operating environment.

The draft plan sets out Council's priority projects, services, programs and other initiatives for the year ahead. It will be released for community consultation on Thursday, 18 May, 2023.

Mid Murray Mayor Simone Bailey said the Draft 2023/24 Annual Business Plan and Budget prioritises essential works and services, with Council also committed to identifying cost savings and efficiencies to improve the financial position of the business.

"Council has already started reviewing our operations to identify financial sustainability measures and cost savings," Mayor Bailey said.

"This work will continue over the coming six months, including a review of our Strategic Plan. As part of that, we'll be taking a close look at efficiencies and savings opportunities to ensure that any measures taken are done so in a planned and considered way.

"Council will be consulting with community throughout this process to ensure they have the opportunity for input into any changes we may decide to make.

"Council is also acutely aware of the financial pressures facing the community, and the need to balance affordability for the community while implementing measures to deliver long-term sustainability."

In the short-term, Flood recovery is the biggest challenge facing the Council, with a $2M provision in the draft plan for ongoing works. This has combined with the substantial costs already incurred by Council for preparation and recovery during 2022/23, and escalating cost pressures across its operations and soaring inflation costs.

"Before the floods, Council was already facing a challenging operating environment with significant cost pressures due to high inflation," Mayor Bailey said.

"The flood disaster – and the huge damage bill it has left behind – has exacerbated this and made financial planning for both the immediate future and the longer-term incredibly difficult.

"As a Council, we cover a large geographic area – however, our population and, therefore, our rate base, is quite small. The floods inundated over 2,300 properties, or 35% of homes in our area which account for 36% of our ratable income.

"Council's flood emergency response, recovery, clean-up and repairs has already cost nearly $7M – and a provision has been made for a further $2M in 2023/24."

MEDIA RELEASE*BEST-SELLING AUSTRALIAN AUTHOR DARRY FRASER VISITS MORGAN TO MENTOR WRITERS

Acclaimed historical women's fiction author Darry Fraser has made a name for herself writing best-selling stories that showcase Australia's rural heritage – and in July she will share some of her secrets with local writers in Morgan.

Author of 12 books – including the popular The Murray series – Darry will visit Morgan for an Author Talk on 6 July and a writing workshop on 7 July.

Hosted through the Morgan Public Library, Ms Fraser's visit will give locals a chance to hear – and learn – from one of Australia's most-loved historical fiction authors.

While in Morgan, Ms Fraser will also be researching for an upcoming novel, due for release in 2025.

Mid Murray Mayor Simone Bailey said the event was a win for the local community.

"Often our local readers have to travel long distances to larger towns or to the city to attend an author talk or take a writing class," Mayor Bailey says.

"Darry's visit will allow readers to hear from a popular writer closer to home. It will also provide a rare opportunity for our budding authors to learn from one of the best when it comes to writing historical fiction.

"It's also exciting to hear that Darry will be using her time in Morgan and the Mid Murray for research that will shape one of her future novels – and hopefully we'll see Morgan in the spotlight again when it hits the shelves in two years' time."

Ms Fraser's The Murray series centres on life in colonial times and the paddle steamer era along the Murray River and has featured towns including Renmark and Echuca. Her other novels have been set in rural South Australia and Victoria.

With stories that take the reader on a journey through Australia's unique history – from the majestic paddle steamers of the Murray River to the chaotic gold fields of Victoria and the isolated wilds of the South East – Darry Fraser has made a name for herself in bringing the nation's heritage to life. Her appearance in Morgan is one not to be missed for readers, those interested in history and anyone looking for an entertaining evening.

The Author Talk will be held at the Morgan Activity Centre on Thursday, 6 July at 6pm, with a light supper provided.

The Writing Workshop will also run at the Morgan Activity Centre, from 10.30am on Friday, 7 July. Writers should bring a notebook, pen and their creativity. Spaces are limited and bookings are essential.

To find out more, or to book for either event, visit <https://www.trybooking.com/CHOHJ>.
